Danuri captures images of moon's surface

Seen is a photo of the moon's largest dark spot, also known as the Ocean of Storms, taken on Jan. 13 by a camera embedded in the Danuri lunar orbiter. On Monday, the science ministry unveiled photos that the Danuri took just 100 kilometers above the moon from Jan. 2 to Feb. 3. After completing a month-long test operation, the spacecraft began its scientific research on Feb. 4.
